

ARCHITECTURAL DIGEST

REAL ESTATE

3 Frank Lloyd Wright Houses You Can Buy Right Now

Here's your chance to own a piece of architectural history

TEXT BY JENNIFER TZESES AND KATHERINE MCGRATH Posted June 6, 2017

Few names are as synonymous with modern architecture as Frank Lloyd Wright. The man known for iconic buildings and residences such as the Guggenheim Museum in New York and Fallingwater in rural Pennsylvania was a leading talent in the world of 20th-century architecture, and his works are equally revered today. But not all of Wright's designs are historical treasures to admire from afar—here are three you can live in right now.

Photo: Courtesy of Houlihan Lawrence

Tirranna

Located in New Canaan, Connecticut, this Frank Lloyd Wright masterpiece was built in 1955 overlooking the Noroton River. The 6,917 square-foot home features 7 bedrooms, 8.1 baths, large picture windows, gold leaf chimneys, a guest house, and more. $7,200,000; Listing at: <http://www.houlihanlawrence.com/property/62481223/432-frogtown-road-new-canaan-ct>

Photo: Courtesy of Houlihan Lawrence

Tirranna

The home takes its name, Tirranna, from the Aboriginal word for "running waters," as the property sits atop a waterfall.

Photo: Courtesy of Pamela Linn

Booth House

The Sherman M. Booth home was built in 1915 during the earlier part of Frank Lloyd Wright's career. At 5 bedrooms, 4.1 bathrooms, and 4 fireplaces, the Booth House is one of the larger prairie homes that Wright designed. Many of the original details chosen by the designer remain, including sconces, hardware, built-in bookshelves, art glass, and more. $1,900,000; Listing at: <http://www.pamelatilton.com/the-sherman-booth-house.html>

Photo: Courtesy of Pamela Linn

Ingalls House

Located in River Forest, Illinois, the Prairie-style Ingalls House was built in 1909 on an unusually deep lot. A cantilevered roof and a balcony visually exaggerate the horizontal lines of the design, and every main room has windows on three sides for plenty of light. There are four bedrooms, one full bath, and two half baths. $999,000; Listing at: <http://www.pamelatilton.com/the-ingalls-house.html>

Photo: Courtesy of Pamela Linn

Ingalls House

Wright also created remarkable art-glass windows with copper caning throughout the 2,800-square-foot home, which has an asking price of $899,000.